

Five election pledges for further education

a million voices for public services

Further education colleges play a vital role in sustaining the UK's national and local economies. Colleges provide education in difficult economic times and re-skilling and training for those who lose their jobs and are looking for new work. They generate jobs and bring money into the surrounding businesses.

UNISON wants to see FE colleges survive and thrive and has drawn up five election pledges we want all major political parties to endorse.

What you can do

Ask your parliamentary candidate if, like UNISON, they will support:

- 1 guaranteed access to high-quality education and training for all learners
- 2 big business making a greater financial contribution to FE
- 3 a statutory right to learning in the workplace
- 4 a legally enforceable cap on college principals' pay
- 5 a public commitment to no compulsory redundancies.

UNISON will check if they stick to their promises in the next parliament, so tell us your parliamentary candidate's response by emailing: education@unison.co.uk
