

Making UNISON's LGBT group more inclusive by changing the name to LGBT+ - Frequently asked questions

Why change the name?

The change of name to LGBT+ is aimed at making the current group more inclusive. Young people are increasingly identifying with a sexual orientation and/or gender identity that do not currently fit into the limited LGBT definition. As a trade union UNISON has a proud history of inclusion and diversity and in order to continue this we need to ensure we are relevant to all members.

Who will be included within the +?

Anybody who may be at risk of prejudice or discrimination on the basis of their sexual orientation and/or gender identity. The 'plus' aims to include the wide spectrum of groups and identities that make up the LGBT umbrella.

Will this mean the National LGBT Committee seeking more seats on other committees?

No, it will just make the current LGBT group more inclusive and representative of our membership.

If the 'plus' includes non-binary people will they be eligible to stand for reserved women's seats on committees?

No, as a non-binary person does not identify as either male or female, they will not be able to do this however they will be able to stand for any seats designated as being open to the general membership.

What is the benefit to the wider membership?

Changing to include the 'plus' will make the group more relevant to many younger people who do not feel that the current LGBT acronym is relevant to them. This will make UNISON more attractive to them as a trade union and has the potential to create new members.

The change will also bring the UNISON groups identity in line with other trade union LGBT+ groups and LGBT+ organisations.

I am an LGBT ally, can I join?

Sorry but no. The group is for those who individually identify as LGBT+, although we value the continued support of allies.

Will it cost the union more money to change the name?

No, any costs are minor, such replacing stock items of literature etc and will be done so as cost effectively as possible and within existing budgets.

What is the cost of not changing the name?

Already a certain section of the LGBT+ community do not feel the existing group is welcoming to them simply because of the first impressions created by having the limiting LGBT acronym. This may make other unions with LGBT+ groups appear more relevant and attractive to them and UNISON may have lost the opportunity of gaining their membership.

Is this a way for the National LGBT Committee to get extra seats on the NEC?

No. The National LGBT Committee does not currently have any seats on the NEC and has no desire to seek any. At the 2018 National LGBT Conference this matter was debated by the membership who overwhelmingly voted against seeking NEC seats. We believe the LGBT groups interests are best served through the Self Organised Group structure.

Will it aid recruitment?

Yes, the relevance and ability to recognise and represent the views of more people will increase the groups recruitment potential while at the same time increase the wealth of knowledge and number of activists.

Why not just increase the letters in the acronym, like LGBTQIA or something similar?

By adding the 'plus' UNISON are future proofing our union and our group as language and the way people define themselves are constantly evolving. If UNISON were to limit ourselves to one fixed definition (as we currently do) then we are at risk of becoming irrelevant to some people in potentially a very short space of time. If this were the case the group would need to go back to LGBT and National Delegate Conferences every time they sought to update their name.

The LGBT group learnt some very hard lessons at the turn of this century when it sought to change from a Lesbian and Gay Group to LGBT. It took a number of years to achieve the name change.

The group need 2/3rds of the vote at National Delegate Conference to bring in this rule change.
